

ABSTRACT

Methods, systems and computer software products are provided for efficient management of large data sets. In one preferred embodiment, data are grouped according to their most frequent access requirement. Each group of the data is encoded as a single binary object. The binary objects are stored in a relational database. Component software product for encoding and decoding are also provided.